His performance of a Brahms sonata was pleasing, but even Mr. Berumen's youth did not succeed in camouflaging the boresomeness of Glazounoff's theme and variations—the variations being of the endless type. The planist was at his best in Rachmaninoff's "Elegie" and other short pieces.

In the evening, at the same hall, Charlotte Demuth-Williams's violing playing was as gracious as her personality. Here is a woman virtuosa who does not strait every nerve to achieve aggressive masculinity. Mrs. Williams has a rarely beautiful tone, warm, emotional, sympathetic, adequate technic and delightful repose. She gave genuine pleasure in Handel's Sonata in A major, Bruch's Concerto in G minor, and a group of shorter pieces by Sinding, Grasse, Sitt and others.
